

Everyone has a Beginning

Everyone has a beginning, all people you have ever met and will ever meet have had a beginning. No matter what kind of beginning they had, they are all people. Some people had a better beginning than others, some people went to public school and some didn't, some children played sports and some didn't.

We are all people, but we are all different. No one has ever been or will ever be the same as you. But everyone deserves life. Everyone should have the chance to play sports, have friends, go camping and enjoy life. All people deserve to live, no matter if you want kids or not. You should never kill an innocent life that has never done anything wrong just because "you don't want kids." All people deserve a chance to live. Humans are not animals to be killed!

Everyone had a beginning and no one had the same beginning. Some people had a big house, some lived in an apartment, and some didn't have anywhere to live and that should never happen. Some people were adopted, some weren't, some people had both parents and some only had one. Some people's parents divorced and some had no parents at all. Some people had five or more siblings, some didn't have any. Some people lived with their Aunts or Grandparents and some people lived with their siblings.

Not everyone had a great or enjoyable childhood, some didn't have a lot. However, we all had a beginning and we all deserved one too! God knew you were pregnant before you did and he had a plan for you, he knew that child would make your life better not "ruin it."
